

Treasury Department,

Bureau of the Mint,

Washington, D. C., February 18, 1899

Mr. S. Hyde, Esq.,

625 Langdon Street,

Madison, Wisconsin,

In reply to your letter of the 15th instant you are respectfully informed that what are known as proof coins in both gold, silver and copper, are struck by the Mint at Philadelphia each year, and are sold to collectors and numismatists. The price of silver and minor proof coins is being $2.50, and the face value $1.91. The price of a proof set of gold coins is $43.00 and the face value $37.50.

The planchets from which these coins are struck are highly polished before receiving the impression of the dies. They contain the same quantity of silver and gold as the ordinary coins.

Respectfully yours,

Acting Director of the Mint.

S.

RG104 E-235 Vol 305 Misc Correspondence

Treasury Department,
Bureau of the Mint,
Washington, D.C.,

February 18, 1899

Albert S. Hyde, Esq.,
825 Langdon Street,
Madison, Wisconsin,

Sir:

In reply to your letter of the 15th instant you are respectfully informed that what are known as proof coins in both gold, silver and minor are struck by the Mint at Philadelphia each year, and are sold to collectors and numismatists. The price of silver and minor proof coins being $2.50, and the face value $1.91. The price of a proof set of gold coins is $43.00 and the face value $37.50.

The planchets from which these coins are struck are highly polished before receiving the impression of the dies. They contain the same quantity of silver and gold as the ordinary coins.

Respectfully yours,
[Signature] Benjamin F. Butler,
Acting Director of the Mint.

S.